IV.回答问题型阅读 (2003 宜昌阅读理解 C 篇, 共 10 分)

“I have to live on because life is so beautiful.” These words of one of my patients who suffers from(遭受)SARS continue to ring in my ears. This patient's whole family has been infected (感染) with SARS—her mother and brother have already died and her father is still seriously ill. I was deeply moved by her courage(勇气) and understood for the first time in my life the weight of my duty. I have to help others live on.

When I treated my first SARS patient on April 25, my only worry was that my knowledge in treating SARS patients was not enough. My friends of mine keep asking why I'm not frightened to do this. When you see a family suffering from SARS and seriously ill patients worrying about their dying relatives, the only thing you want to do is to try to help them.

I treat SARS patients as ordinary patients, never making them feel they are dangerous. I believe this mental support (精神支柱) is important to those suffering from loneliness and despair (绝望). After a day's work, when lying in bed at the hospital, the most beautiful sound I want to hear is my two-year-old son's voice.

II. 阅读理解

Passage 1 (2003 淄博阅读理解 D 篇, 共 7.5 分)

Everything has two sides. One side of SARS is already clear. It is a terrible sickness, and people are afraid of it. There were 2,601 cases(患者)in China, and about 115 of them have died. But, there's another side.

SARS shows how fragile (脆弱的)life can be. Suddenly, not just the old people are thinking about death. Everyone now knows there might not always be a tomorrow.

Wang Xinying, a student in Taiyuan, met with a SARS patient (病人)in mid-April. He had to stay at home for at least two weeks. "Watching TV about more and more SARS patients dying, I never knew that death could be so close," he said.

SARS teaches people to be grateful, not only for their own lives, but also for others.

Doctors and nurses, for example, have to spend all their time with SARS patients. As a result, more than 20% of the SARS cases in China are medical workers.

Xu Bing, a student of Beijing No. 5 Middle School wants to be a doctor. "Although they know of the dangers, doctors and nurses still work hard to save people's lives. They are real heroes (英雄)." He said.

SARS also teaches pity. The past few weeks have been terrible for Chinese people. But there are worse things than SARS in the world, such as wars and terror (恐怖). Think of how Americans felt on 9/11.

The people are joining together to work in this difficult time. When this passes, China and its people will learn great lessons.

66. If people meet with SARS patients, _____ will be kept away from others for some time.

A. only students B. only doctors and nurses C. only the old people D. anyone

67. Now Wang Xinying knows _____.

- A. death is very far
- B. it is easy for people to die
- C. it's difficult for old people to die
- D. SARS patients can't be saved

68. According to the passage, how many medical workers become SARS patients?

- A. About 520.
- B. More than 2,601
- C. About 540.
- D. Over 115.

69. Why does Xu Bing want to be a doctor in the future?

- A. Because he wants to make a lot of money.
- B. Because he wants to be famous.
- C. Because he's sure he can kill SARS.
- D. Because he thinks medical workers are great.

70. The best title(标题)of the passage is _____.

- A. SARS is terrible
- B. Looking on the brighter side of SARS
- C. Keeping away from SARS
- D. The way to kill SARS

Passage 2 (2003 黄冈阅读理解 B 篇, 每小题 2 分, 共 10 分)

EVERYTHING has two sides. One side of SARS is already clear. It is a deadly disease, which causes fear. There were 2, 601 cases (病例) recorded on the Chinese mainland on April 24, according to government report. 115 people have died and numbers keep rising.

But, there is another side.

SARS is a reminder (提醒) of how fragile life can be. Suddenly, it's not just the old people who are thinking about death. Everyone now realizes there might not always be a tomorrow.

Wang Xinying, a student in Taiyuan, Shanxi Province came into contact (接触) with a suspected (疑似) SARS patient in mid-April. He was told to stay at home for at least two weeks. "Watching TV about more and more SARS patients dying, I never knew that death could be so close. Life is valuable (珍贵的) and I'm going to treasure (珍惜) every single day," he said.

SARS teaches people to be grateful, both for their own lives and for others. Doctors and nurses, for example, have to spend all their time with infected (被感染的) patients. As a result, more than one fifth of SARS cases in China are medical workers.

Xu Bing, a student of Beijing No.5 Middle School wants to be a doctor in the future. “Although they certainly know the dangers, doctors and nurses kept working hard on saving people’s lives. I’m deeply moved by what they have done. I think they are real heroes, ”he said.

SARS also teaches sympathy(同情). The past few weeks have been terrible for Chinese people. But there are far worse things than SARS in this world, such as war, earthquakes and robberies. Think of the Iraqis, who have been living terrible lives for 20 years. Think of how the Americans felt on 9/11.

And finally, SARS offers the chance to grow. All different kinds of people and the governments are joining together to work in this difficult time. When this passes, China and its people will have learned great lessons.

87. What does “Everyone now realizes there might not always be a tomorrow.”mean?

It means life is easy to _____ and we must _____ our life.

88. How long was Wang Xinying told to stay at home?

He was told to stay at home for about _____ a _____.

89. Why can medical workers be easily infected?

Because they have to be with infected patients _____ and _____.

In this spring we have worked and studied as usual, but SARS broke out suddenly. In time of danger you have gone to the front for fighting against SARS without thinking about your own safety and health. It's hard for us to show our thanks to you with words. We will work much harder and have better living habits.

We will fight against SARS together with you until we win the war.

SARS broke out in Beijing in spring. We had to stay at home in those days. I began to learn the lessons by myself. I studied some of my subjects from Classroom on the Air. Usually I read English in the morning and did my homework in the afternoon. I telephoned my teachers and classmates when I had questions in my studies. They gave me a great help.

Now I know it is important to learn how to study. I think I must study harder than before.
